While you could use a research agreement template to aid you, it would still be wise to know the steps to make one properly. Check business partnership agreement templates for more. First, start with the abstract. This section of the agreement consists of a step-by-step discussion of the issues that need to be addressed in other sections of the agreement. Then, move on to the introduction. Here, you need to state how your collaborative research is beneficial to a particular population, as well as the benefits to both parties. Next, you need to write a statement of objectives and statement of work. The statement of objectives outlines your goals and why collaboration is important. The statement of work details who is responsible for what, and your research methodology. The next thing to include in your research plan templates would be the general provisions, which outline the rules and mechanisms of your collaboration. Lastly, add the budget and the list of materials you will need. The budget details the resources each party will need and what they can contribute, while the list of materials is an appendix listing necessary materials and quantities. With these insights, you should hopefully have a better idea of how to craft your collaboration agreements with more ease.
